

National Award to Hirsch

First KU, now the U.S.! English Undergraduate Studies Coordinator Bud Hirsch, who received an award for faculty advising from the University's Advising Association last spring, has been selected as a 2004 Outstanding Advising Certificate of Merit recipient in the faculty advising category by NACADA (National Academic Advising Association). He will be honored at an awards reception on 6 October at the Cincinnati Convention Center during NACADA's annual meetings and will also be featured on the conference display poster. NACADA has sent a press release to local media outlets regarding this award, as well as several letters to prominent University administrators. Coincidentally, Sue Lorenz, Assistant Director of KU's Honors Program and spouse of Professor Tom Lorenz, has also been selected to receive a national certificate of merit in the professional advising category this year. Congratulations to both Bud and Sue!
