Look Behind You!

The Department of English and the Honors Program are co-sponsoring a unique program integrating lyrics, storytelling, music, and photography on Thursday, 17 October, at 7:00 pm, in Woodruff Auditorium of the Kansas Union. “Look Behind You!” features Northern Irish singer-songwriter Steafán Hanvey in a multi-media performance “that details how a father and son (both artists) have negotiated the personal and political landscapes of Northern Ireland. Using image and voice, anecdote and memory, it showcases Bobby Hanvey’s [Steafán’s father’s] prize-winning photojournalism along with radio-edits of his interviews with some of Northern Ireland’s best-known figures. These are complemented and contextualized by Steafán Hanvey’s storytelling, which comes in the form of critically-acclaimed songwriting, and a trained academic’s gift for presenting complex issues in an engaging manner” (Hanvey website). The program “mashes up the public and the private, and dares to promote the artistic maxim that ‘the end of art is peace’”

Announcements, Notes, & News

• In case you missed it, “Learning Without Boundaries,” the blog of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences that is disseminated by e-mail, featured KU English’s Lydia Ash in the “extracurricular activities” section of its 2 October post. The piece focused on Lydia’s nocturnal adventures restoring a 1968 Chevelle. There were some great photographs. We’re printing one that did not appear on the reverse, though we don’t know how well it will show up in black&white. Take a look at the color version online (English web page) or on the current events bulletin board in the hall. How many mechanics can boast a manicure like that?! This weekend is also your last chance to catch Lydia’s belly dancing routine at the Kansas City Renaissance Festival. She is retiring from the gig after this season.
